

DATA SECURITY

If you've got data, you've got problems.

No one needs to tell you that customer names, credit card numbers, and transaction records must be protected.

Cyber attackers are constantly seeking your gold mine of data. Government agencies and insurance companies require compliance with security standards to protect your data.

You pay a high price if you don't have adequate data security:

- Fines and fees

If you're caught in noncompliance, you face stiff penalties and fines. And fees associated with mitigation activities from cyber attackers can be a costly endeavor.

- Productivity

Enforcing the rules for data security can create complicated business processes and restrict employees from using tools designed to boost productivity.

- Reputation

News of a data breach can spread in a matter of minutes and carry with it negative publicity.
